ENGELBERT HUMPERDINCK

Engelbert Humperdinck, the legendary crooner who gave us the quintessential ballads such as "Release Me", "Can't Take My Eyes Off You", "The Last Waltz", "There Goes My Everything", "After the Lovin'", "Quando, Quando, Quando", and other timeless classics is set to make his first stop in Asia at the Araneta Coliseum.

The highly-anticipated concert, dubbed "Engelbert Humperdinck: The 40th Anniversary Tour" is part of the music icon's celebration of transcending romance through time, with a glorious career spanning four decades and running. With his unique voice that has recorded everything from ballads, disco, rock, gospel, and movie soundtrack hits, Engelbert Humperdinck has proven himself a consistently powerful performer even with the advent of younger artists and new music genres.

Born Arnold George Dorsey, Humperdinck adopted the name of the famed Austrian composer and made it his stage name when he exploded into the music scene of the Sixties, sharing the top of the charts with The Beatles, The Rolling Stones, Tom Jones, among others. His mellow, honeyed voice combined with his casually elegant good looks has made him extremely popular most especially with the ladies, who would attempt to tear his clothes off as he performed onstage! Today, armed with a long list of accolades from the industry, fan mania for the King of Romance lives on as he continues to pack audiences in soldout concerts around the globe.
